ANTI-SUFFRAGE NOTES

Ex-President William H. Taft has recently written an exhaustive article on Votes for Women. While he says some things in favor of suffrage for women in the future, he sums up his arguments thus:

On the whole, however, if in any of the states now acting on the question I were called upon to vote I would vote against giving the suffrage, because I think to force it on an unwilling or indifferent majority of women lacking in needed training and general experience is to add to the electorate an element which will not improve its governing capacity. The women have been without a vote for now one hundred and twenty-five years and they have not really suffered by it. The Government has continued to be a good one.

Their disabilities have been removed, their rights of life, liberty and property have been made equal to those of men. The longer the extension of the franchise to women waits, the better they will be prepared for it and the more good and less harm it will do. Let us, therefore, not force the ballot into their hands on theory, but let it come as a growth in their own conception of the part they ought to play in the political life of the country.

The country is not going to suffer by being deprived of the votes of women. There is no great evil which their being kept out of the franchise continues. There are a dozen states now trying the change. The older states can watch its results with interest and care and can follow from time to time as their judgment shall dictate, and in this quiet, reasonable, common-sense way the change will be effected without friction and without injury. The exercise of the ballot itself is a preparation for its future wiser exercise, but that does not minimize the wisdom of delay in the older and more populous states. The dangers of the ballot in the hands of women to the state are greater with the congested population and the great mass of ignorant women in the Eastern States than in the Far Western States. We may, therefore, well hope that the coming of the franchise for women will be postponed as long as feasible and will be a gradual one.

The franchise has never been regarded as an inalienable right of an American citizen. Women and children born in the United States, or naturalized and resident there, are citizens of the United States and are entitled to all the protection and guaranties of individual rights enjoyed by adult males.

I question whether in politics and in resistance to corruption we should find any sturdier honesty among women than among men. As a body it is said they would insist on a higher moral tone in legislation. I don't think the present moral tone of our legislation can be criticized, if that is determined by its purposes as professed in its preamble or by its promoters. Legislatures of men are not prone to legislative protection of vice or evil, nor are they reluctant to enact laws denouncing it and to claim credit for it. It was a congress of men that passed the White Slave Act, the Pure Food Act, and the act to prevent the spread of the cocaine and other drug habits. The most common defect in legislation is not in the ideal good aimed at, but in the lack of practical provision for its attainment. Women will not be any better able to cure this defect than men.

There has been much indignation expressed at the greater penalty visited by society upon a woman who sins morally than that upon a man. Advocates of woman suffrage have argued that when women vote this can be changed. Such a claim is a fair illustration of the fundamental error of much of the case the suffragists present. The error is in the assumption that legislation can cure all inequalities which they conceive to be wrongs. The inequality in this case is not found in the law. Men and women under the law are subject to equal penalties for sexual crimes. The inequality and injustice, if it be one, is in the attitude of society toward the subject, and statute law is helpless to control the view of society, or what Professor Sumner, for want of a better word, has called the "mores".

McDOUGALL'S MUSINGS

A Round-About Paper

A man called Dumba is just now about as well advertised as was an elephant named Jumbo, and if the German ambassador and this Austrian Dumba are both told to go home, it will do no harm and does not oblige President Wilson to declare war, and in my opinion would be the best answer to the curt and ungentlemanly note we got from Berlin.

I saw a friend the other day who was born in England, who a year ago said that Germany had taken a bigger bite than she could swallow and that Russia, France, Belgium and England would in less than a year bring the Kaiser to his knees. Today my friend says that Germany will win this war and dictate her terms of peace to the whole of Europe. My reply was "Wait and see." If Germany is to make Belgium one of her provinces just because it is a desirable country to steal, then I can forcibly take possession of my neighbor's garden, take his house for my servants to live in, and turn him out into the street. I do not believe that even in Mexico they would permit me to do this, and will what is called the civilized world allow Germany to keep Belgium? I do not believe that what we call the world, America included, will permit the Kaiser with all his military well-oiled machinery to do this. It is almost ludicrous to think that while this plunder is going on the Kaiser says to his cultured people "God is with us!"

The number of candidates for the governorship of this State may permit Governor Walsh to replace himself. If all the other horses would withdraw from the contest, McCall would win, old as he is, as this is a stand-pat Republican State; but dividing the Republican party into three factions gives the Democrats the victory as their party is as yet not divided.

In last week's Editorial Cinder the editor pays a well-deserved compliment to a friend and fellow countryman of mine; I mean Mr. Barnett Rogers. Mr. Rogers I have known for thirty years and have never known him to do a mean, ungentlemanly action and have been treated by him in a kindly way, although we do not altogether agree about the tariff. We agree to differ. In referring to Mr. Rogers as a likely candidate for parliamentary honors, and in electing him Andover would honor itself, our respected Townsman editor and old Ian McDougall are for once agreed. But I do not like the tone of his remarks made about an aristocratic little town which is disfigured and made ugly by the building of cheap houses or huts. Cheap houses or huts are as necessary to the growth of a country as the finest brown-stone houses.

Let me give as an illustration the case of the Brick Block near the railway station. This brick block tenement, ugly house has been more useful for Andover than the finest mansion in town. You cannot put a poor immigrant family into a forty-dollar-a-month house, and cheap three or four-room houses are required. The question is, Where are you to put these houses, out of the sight of sentimental gentry riding in automobiles?

The tenants of these houses are workers and produce something, while the occupier of the stone-front house may be a drone who produces nothing. I am not saying that fine houses and nice gardens are not needed; far from it. The occupier of that fine house very likely was born in a hut or shanty, even in a worse room than any in the Brick Block.

This genteel sentimantality is drawing the very life-blood out of our churches, and the idea that only those who wear peach-colored kid gloves and a Paris-made dress can get into heaven must be changed. One reason why the Episcopal church is thriving in this country is that along with its chaste and beautiful ritual it appeals to humanity and prays daily "for us miserable sinners", while our Congregational churches with their crude forms of worship are apt to have for their prayer, "God, I thank thee that I am not a sinner! I live in a forty-dollar house!"

Let us learn to respect humanity. The common people heard Him gladly.

BOSTON THEATRES

WILBUR

"Nobody Home," the musical comedy success of the year, will start its fifth week at the Wilbur theatre next Monday evening. With Lawrence Grossmith, Adele Rowland, Charles Judels, Maude Odell and numerous artists heading the cast, this musical comedy has proved the strongest drawing card the Wilbur theatre has had, and the Bostonians have not been slow in appreciating its value. The chorus is out of the ordinary in that it contains exceptionally pretty girls who can really sing and dance and there are two feature dancers, Quentin Tod and Helen Clarke, who exhibit the very newest thing in modern dancing. They are the latest discoveries in the dancing world and have won an ovation at each performance never before equalled in the musical or dancing field. Their youth and grace place them at the head of the list of present day dancers.

SHUBERT

Four eminent Bostonians have enthusiastically endorsed "Experience" at the Shubert theatre, during the past week, and it will enter upon its fourth week of sensational success next Monday night with a record of having done a capacity business during the past three weeks. The quartet of distinguished personages who have been thrilled and pleased with "Experience" is headed by Governor Walsh, who said: "I thoroughly enjoyed every moment. I think 'Experience' is a great play, well acted." "Experience" is being presented at the Shubert by a superb cast of eighty-two players, in which the work of Ernest Glendinning as Youth; William Ingersoll as Experience, and Charles A. Stevenson as Wealth, stand out most prominently.

The play is presented at a scale of popular prices, while there is a bargain matinee Wednesday when the best seats are $1, and every seat in the house is reserved.

MAJESTIC

Tomorrow afternoon marks the 289th performance of D. W. Griffith's mighty spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation" in this city, by far the greatest number of consecutive performances for any theatrical attraction in the history of the Boston stage. After twenty weeks of capacity business at the Tremont theatre the announcement that the engagement would end a week ago occasioned such an overwhelming demand from theatregoers all over New England that the engagement be extended, that arrangements were made to transfer the picture to the Majestic theatre, and during the past two weeks crowded houses have attested to the public's appreciation of this continuation.

At the Majestic theatre patrons will find the same augmented orchestra and comfortable environment which prevailed during the long run at the Tremont theatre, and judging by the attendances the past week, "The Birth of a Nation" is in for another long run. Performances will be given every afternoon and evening and seats may be procured for two weeks in advance.

HOLLIS STREET

Large audiences have roared with side-splitting laughter ever since the historic Hollis Street theatre was opened on Monday evening, September 13, with the Ned Wayburn, Inc. production of "She's in Again". The critics were unanimous that the farce, adapted from the French farce called "My Wife from Houfleur", is the funniest piece which has come to Boston in years.

The piece is by Thomas J. Gray and was the hit of the spring and summer season in New York at the Gaiety theatre. Ada Lewis heads the New York cast and plays the part she created, that of Anne Rayner, the aunt from Flatbush. Supporting Miss Lewis in this original production are the following well-known metropolitan artists: Clarence Oliver, Edwin Nicander, Geo. Schiller, Mae Hopkins, Ann Warrington, Sarah McVicker, Grace Bryan, Mahdah Weems, John Gray and George Riddell.

PLYMOUTH

"Neutrality" is the basic keynote of "The White Feather", the great war play, now running at the Plymouth theatre. The story illustrates a battle of wits between the British War Office and a quartet of German spies, aiding a contemplated raid of submarines upon the English coast. As a coincidence, or perhaps a prophecy, the acting fits in closely with some recent events in which the warring nations are involved. The piece, however, rests for its success upon its purely dramatic interest, and is just the sort of play that may be thoroughly enjoyed by Germans, French, English and Americans. The opening scene shows the interior of an English boarding house located on a seacoast. The place is run by Mrs. Sanderson and her son, presumably British loyalists, but in reality spies of the German Government. Christopher Brent, a careless and equally assinine chap, unable to give any reasonable excuse for his failure to fight for the colors, is at the head of the British secret service and watches with keen eyes the attempts of the German spies to warn their fatherland of certain British expeditionary forces. Brent is assisted by Miriam Lee, who lends invaluable assistance in unearthing plots and counterplots of the Germans.

"The White Feather" is in Boston for a limited time only. Mail orders for seats are given prompt and careful attention. The scale of prices for this engagement ranges from 50 cents to $1.50. Thursday and Saturday are the regular matinees. On Thursday $1.00 is the top price for the best orchestra seats.

PARK SQUARE

If you would enjoy a thoroughly delightful evening's entertainment don't fail to see "Twin Beds", Selwyn and Company's energetic comedy, now about to complete the first month of its engagement at the Park Square theatre, Boston. Not in years has Boston enjoyed such a bright, snappy and breezy comedy. The piece is the joint work of Salisbury Field and Margaret Mayo, the latter author of "Baby Mine", and is presented in three acts full of clean, wholesome fun. From the rise to the drop of the curtain you pile laugh upon laugh, so that you not only proverbially laugh "your head off", but you cannot prevent your sides from aching. Such

Equal Suffrage Open-Air Meeting

The third open-air meeting under the auspices of the Equal Suffrage League of Andover will be held tomorrow evening, September 18, in Andover square.

The speaker will be Mrs. Glendower Evans of Boston, one of the most prominent of the Massachusetts women who are espousing the cause of equal suffrage before the public today. She has long been identified with the movement in America. She led the delegation of 300 working women who presented to the President in March, 1912, the importance of the ballot for the wage-earning woman. This is but one of her efforts to bring the subject before the people of the country. Her study and efforts in connection with other movements for the betterment of social and economic conditions have brought her into close touch with such people as Jane Addams, Katherine Bement Davis, Senator and Mrs. Robert M. LaFollette, and Lillian Wald and many others.

She is a trustee of the Massachusetts Training School for Wayward Boys and Girls, and a member of the Minimum Wage Committee o. Massachusetts.

Mrs. Evans is organizing Peace committees throughout the State. She attended the International Peace Conference held at The Hague recently, to which she was a delegate. Mrs. Evans is an eloquent and convincing speaker, and never fails to make many converts to the cause.

Before speaking in Andover square at eight o'clock, Mrs. Evans will give an address in Ballardvale at seven o'clock.

Perley F. Gilbert will introduce the speaker.

"Although the entrance of women into civic life has been complicated by discussions about suffrage, it has had a most stimulating effect upon the social conscience. It has reinforced the social conscience at points where it needed strengthening. Moral reform is quite sure to suffer from the lack of singleness of purpose and from the lack of persistence. The average citizen is willing to support a reform movement if it does not conflict too much with other interests, and if it does not take too much of his time. These limitations characterize the action of most men in business. The professional anti-reformers understand perfectly these elements of human weakness in reform, and simply give them time to produce their effect. There has been a noticeable change in the spirit of civic reforms since women became more directly concerned in them. They are kept to their purpose and held to their accomplishment. The charge is made that where women have the right to vote they seldom register in full numbers for general elections. Doubtless the charge is true. The compensating fact appears in the definiteness of their interests and in their tenacity of purpose when their interests are aroused.

"Anyone who follows the course of legislation must take note of the vast increase of legislative action on subjects which invite especially the judgment, the intelligence, and the experimental knowledge of women. The widening of the field of investigation for legislative purposes is largely in those directions in which women of trained minds can best act as experts. And many of the administrative positions created within this widening field under legislative supervision can best be filled by women."

SOCCER

Andover 4, Clan McPherson 1

Andover United defeated Clan McPherson 4 goals to 1 on the Riding Park last Saturday afternoon. The excessive heat was hard on the players, so that there was little dash to the playing of either team. For the first twenty minutes the game was quiet, when the Clans scored. This roused the champions who retaliated by scoring twice in five minutes.

On opening, Andover faced a strong sun which made it difficult for the backs to follow the course of the ball. On account of this several chances were given the Clan forwards to score in the first half, but they failed to grasp their opportunities.

Lack of combination forced the Clan team to a defensive game, but it brought out good individual play by the backs and halves. The Champs showed good and bad by turns, due to the change in their lineup caused by the absence of Munroe and Low and the subsequent shifting of Rennie to tend goal. Half the game was over before Lynch and Gorrie settled to their positions at left and center half, while Caldwell, the other junior, missed a dozen chances to score in the second half.

Andover kicked off but Mathewson got possession and let his left wing away. Taylor, however, fouled Jackson. The free kick let Andover down and Lynch placed well for Dougherty, but the first attempt went past. Again the Clan got on the move but Moore placed too far ahead and the ball went behind. Another advance by this wing finished by a good attempt by Mangham whose shot skimmed the bar. Andover was turned back first by McEwan, then by Clark. Clark kicked far down to Taylor, but Jackson relieved the winger. Mathewson worked the ball to his right wing where Moore missed but recovered and sent over a perfect cross which three of his mates let roll across the goal-mouth.

Mathewson and Emsley were proving troublesome and a nice dropping shot from Mathewson was lost to Black in the sun. Windell closed in and drove hard against the back; the ball slipped out to Taylor who quickly placed it into the net.

The champions centered the ball with the admonition of their supporters ringing over the field. Wishart was called on right away to pick up a shot from Deyermond. Again the United right wing got in close; Clark failed to stop a cross shot and Deyermond slipped past and turned the ball into the goal-mouth where Dougherty evened matters with a fast shot. The champions took a good grip on the game now and carried the ball south. Gilmartin placed well to center and Dougherty gave his side the lead with a fine effort. Half time, Andover 2, Clan McPherson 1.

On resuming, the champions took matters into their own hands. Their opponents were forced on the defensive by the speed of the visitors. The home keeper was called on right away but fisted out well. Andover forced a corner on the right. Gilmartin placed well and Dougherty scored without letting the leather touch the ground. The Clan defense was shot to pieces now and Dougherty parted with a terrific shot which struck the bar; before the uprights had stopped shaking Cairnie caught the rebound and drove straight at the bewildered keeper who struck at the ball and sent it out. Mathewson came to the relief of his mates and his strong, low kick sailed over Black's head. The Clan right wing closed in and Black was beaten; Mangham shot past Rennie but Jackson had dropped back and standing on the goal line kicked out what must have been a sure goal. Back went the ball to the home end, the Chapms moving fast. Joe Gilmartin got the ball and drew the attention of Clark and Emsley; the winger's cross came true and Cairnie uncovered easily found the net for the fourth goal. The attack of the United slackened now and the Clan forwards, who had been spectators all this half, got going. Hackney broke away and made for goal but he was going too fast and ran the ball over the line. Emsley sent a long drive across the goal and Moore got in a hard shot, but Rennie was safe and threw out. Before further scoring could take place the whistle sounded.

Andover — Rennie; Jackson and Black; Coleman, Lynch and Gorrie; Gilmartin, Deyermond, Cairnie, Dougherty and Caldwell.

Clan McPherson — Wishart; McEwan and Clark; Hackney, Mathewson and Emsley; Moore, Mangham, Windell, Hamilton and Taylor.

Score: Andover 4, Clan McPherson 1. Goals by Dougherty 3, Cairnie and Taylor. Referee, John Wilkinson of Lawrence. Linesmen, D. Croall for Andover and F. Pamforth for Clan McPherson. Time, two 45-minute halves.

The report of the district meeting was read in which it was announced that Abbott Village lodge had won the banner for the largest gain in membership during the past quarter. Andover has strengthened its lineup by the securing of Joe Higginbotham for fullback. This should be a fast game as several of last year's stars are in the visitors' lineup.

is the pleasant result of witnessing this charming comedy. The play is a positive mirth-provoker even to the most critical playgoer. Announcement is made that "Twin Beds" will not be seen outside of Boston this season. Therefore if you anticipate this rare pleasure you had better arrange for your seats right now. Strict and accurate attention is given to all mail orders. The prices range from 25 cents to $2.00 and the regular matinees are given on Wednesday and Saturday.

TREMONT TEMPLE

On next Monday afternoon, September 20, there will be presented at the Tremont Temple, Boston, pictures of the bloodiest combat of the European war, "The Battle of Przemyzl." These films were taken under the official sanction of the Austro-Hungarian-German military authorities by operators who were actually in the thick of the battle and risked their lives in the most daring manner so as to obtain intimate, close-up and realistic pictures. Everything is of before and in the event—not afterwards. Beginning with the massive drive through Galacia, it follows on, showing vivid horror upon horror until the fall of the mighty fortress, Przemyzl, (pronounced shem-ee-sil). The actual negatives of the fighting are shown as they were taken in the trenches, in the midst of stirring charges among bursting shells, the storming of the steep heights right to the very walls of the fortress where the dead fall in heaps, and the final piercing of the battlements. All is as it really was, authentic, and a most vivid true spectacle of the worst war the world ever knew. There will be matinees daily at 2.15. Evenings at 8.15. Tickets are priced at 25, 35, and 50 cents, and are now on sale at the box office.

Grand Opera in Boston

Grand opera at popular prices will inaugurate the musical season in Boston, and all who love grandeur and beauty in musical art will have opportunity to hear many of the world's noted songbirds at prices that will cause no undue strain upon the purse-strings. The Shubert interests have assumed control of the Boston Opera House and have secured for a week the famous San Carlo Grand Opera Company, comprising upwards of six score of people.

The grand opera week will begin Monday, September 20, and there will be eight different performances, these to be sung by three different and distinct casts of leading artists. A superb symphony orchestra, under the direction of the noted Italian maestro, Chev. Fulgenzio Guerrieri, a large and brilliant chorus and a beautiful ballet section will constitute other noteworthy features of the San Carlo Company. The roster of leading artists is as follows:

Bassi—Messrs. Pietro DiBiasi, Natale Cervi.

Premiere danseuse—Signorina Margherita Pezzatini.

Musical director — Chev. Fulgenzio Guerrieri

The repertoire arranged for the Boston engagement is as follows, it being noted that there are no repetitions in the list:

Monday, September 20, Rigoletto; Tuesday, Aida; Wednesday matinee, Martha, evening Lucia; Thursday, Cavalleria Rusticana and I' Pagliacci; Friday, Carmen; Saturday matinee, Tales of Hoffman, evening, Il Trovatore.

The San Carlo productions are staged upon a scale of high artistic excellence, with superb scenic and costuming effects, and Boston opera-goers are looking forward to a gala week of great song. The tickets will range in price from 50c to $2 for the night operas; 25c to $1 for the Wednesday and Saturday matinees.

Geraldine Farrar in Photoplay of "Carmen"

Boston is the first city in the United States selected by Geraldine Farrar for her debut as a motion picture star. Announcement comes from Symphony Hall that for a limited engagement beginning October 1, there will be shown there to the accompaniment of an orchestra of fifty and at popular prices, the Paramount Picture "Carmen", produced by the Lasky Feature Play Company and in which the noted prima donna appears as the star in the title role.

Miss Farrar made the request that Boston be selected for the first city in which her motion picture," Carmen," will be seen because it is her native city and because in Symphony Hall, dedicated to the cause of musical art, the auspices of the premiere will be in keeping with the prima donna's serious purpose in entering this new field of animated pictures. Symphony Hall has a seating capacity of 2,500, and through the medium of the screen Miss Farrar anticipates she will reach an entirely new audience of Americans, only a few of whom have seen her in opera or heard her on the concert stage.

Miss Farrar herself took a keen interest in the musical arrangements for her photoplay, "Carmen", and the Lasky musical staff at Hollywood, Cal., had the benefit of her advice and extraordinary knowledge of music when she was at the studios all this summer acting before the camera. Miss Farrar will attend the first showing in Boston.

The Moth Problem in Maine

I would like to call the attention of the large number of people in different sections of the State who are depending entirely on parasites for relief from the gypsy and browntail pests, to a realization that the parasites are unknown in Maine as yet. We do know they are most beneficial and effective in southern Europe, and in this country, in Massachusetts, and we have no reason to doubt their efficiency here in Maine. We anticipate an abundant relief from our minute allies, but to expect any perceptible check or control from them at this stage is an extravagant absurdity; so absurd, in fact, that I wish to discourage rather than foster the belief, until the time of their success is assured.

It is well to remember parasitism is yet in its experimental stage in this State. We know the creature's habits; we can meet them successfully; and are doing so at the present time; we can colonize them, and will do so, on a much larger scale than ever before attempted in Maine. We have yet to determine whether they will survive our long, cold winters or not. If they do survive, and become firmly established, then we hope some day in the not so distant future, the gypsy and browntail epidemic shall be but a memory. Until such time as a natural sequence of parasites is assured, we must maintain our vigilance, and struggle, for control and suppression of both pests. Also we must aid and protect our little friends in every way possible, for only by doing this can we look with an optimistic view into the future.

I would also congratulate the State of Maine in securing the services of J. N. Summers, one of the best authorities on parasitism in this country. Arrangements have been made with A. F. Burgess, chief of the U. S. Laboratory, that enables us to have the valuable services and experience of those in charge of the laboratory situated on Forest avenue where Mr. Summers, as director of the parasite propaganda, would be pleased to give out any information to the public.—Chas. Woods in Portland Argus.

Telephone By-Paths

Most of the places which can be reached by a toll call are towns and villages where the salesman seldom goes because train service is infrequent. Telephone Service is constant.

Every merchant or jobber has within his grasp, in a radius even so small as fifty miles, an amount of business worth going after by telephone, but as yet unknown to him. That business could be his instead of going to distant mail order houses. He need not travel, for the telephone trade or visit can be made at any time.

Traveling salesmen at various junction points along main traveled routes can reach by telephone many small places which otherwise might not be included in their itinerary because of the time and expense involved in a call in person. The Telephone line is direct, and there are practically no unreachable localities.

There will be no charge on a particular party toll call if you are not connected with the person whose name you have given to the toll operator.

HOT WATER

Is a household necessity; abundant hot water is the greatest domestic luxury. ¶ The most successful method of supplying this luxury in every home is with a modern "copper coil" Gas Water Heater.

Hence the Lion Double Copper Coil Water Heater provides a source from which hot water can be obtained at anytime. It is so economical that it is used to furnish quantities of hot water for the bath, kitchen and laundry. It makes household duties easier and gives you a good supply of hot water in a very few minutes.

John Phelps Taylor

The writer has a sense of keen personal loss in the death of Professor John Phelps Taylor. His friendship covered a period of nearly thirty years, in which he had shown an interest in the Townsman, its editor, and the public service rendered, of more than passing value. His advice in this thirty years had frequently been sought and always generously bestowed. His contributions to the Townsman were many and covered a varied field. His personal sympathy was never failing. His friendliness led him to radiate his own peculiar charm upon individual activities, or the combined interest of any group in which he was a part.

Recalling one of his most striking sermons in which he emphasized "sweetness and light", for one who knew him those two words seem perhaps to best represent the qualities which his companionship always unfolded. His big, generous nature gave freely of whatever was in his power to give, whether it were the substantial gifts of financial aid or the even more valued gifts of the friend always friendly. In a quiet way he had a big part in Andover's best things, and through his close association with Andover institutions it is doubtful if any single man exercised a wider influence for good among the young people who come here to town for education than did he.

In his active life he was one of the most brilliant preachers that the Andover Seminary has produced, and in later years there were flashes of that brilliance in his addresses, which made him still the peer of the eloquent men of the day.

It was good to have him as a beloved citizen of Andover. The writer feels it was good to have had him as a personal friend and a counsellor whose judgment was always tempered by that friendliness which made him a valued helper.

Primary Next Tuesday, 12 to 8 P. M.

Another puzzle for the voters is up for solution next Tuesday, the hours fixed for Andover being from twelve noon to eight at night.

Ever since the beginning of a shift in the method of naming candidates, we have had a yearly change in that method, but this year seems to mark a change full of possibilities for a voter's disfranchisement more than any of other years. A single ballot is provided for all parties; on this ballot arranged under three separate headings are the candidates of the three separate parties, Republican, Democratic, and Progressive. Names are placed on each party ticket in alphabetical order as provided by law, and in this respect there is no change in the character of the ballot, BUT — in the very fact that the three tickets are placed before the voter on one ballot, lies the danger which may result in the loss of his entire vote, for under no circumstances, according to the ruling of election officers, can a ballot be counted where a mixed ticket is marked; in other words, if a man desires to vote for a Republican candidate for any one office, he must vote for candidates of no other party for any other office, hence a man who desires to vote for Governor Walsh for renomination cannot vote for Mr. Ham as against Mr. Coolidge, or for one Republican representative candidate against another.

The point of the ruling is based upon what is believed to be the purpose of the law, namely, that the voters of one party cannot have any part in naming candidates for another party.

The application of the working out of this law in Andover is no different from that which is anticipated in other parts of the State. Rumors are rife on the streets of this town as they are on the streets of other towns, that Democrats are to take part in the Republican primary to the advantage of the Democratic party, that Democrats, for example, will choose to nominate the weakest opposing candidate for any particular office where the success of such a candidate will make more sure the success on election day of the candidate of the Democratic party. Andover has never partaken of this sort of campaigning and we don't believe the voters of the town are going to do it this year. It is always a question which side profits the most by such tactics, and for this reason the big leader of the Republicans this year, Mr. McCall, has most emphatically frowned upon every proffer of Democratic support that has been made to him by the many friends he has in the Democratic party. The time for Democratic aid to come to Republicans is on election day and not in settling the primary contest.

The Representative contest in Andover is also somewhat involved in this same kind of talk, but let us hope that for the credit of the town, the Republicans will be allowed to settle their own differences in their own way without interference on the part of any opposing partisans. The Townsman has carefully refrained from any statement that should create any bitterness between the four men who are aspiring to this office as the Republican candidate. Let no other element enter, that would cause a condition to make difficult the election of the nominee properly selected at next Tuesday's primary.

The Swing to McCall

It is doubtful if ever in the history of the Commonwealth two weeks of campaigning have made such a change in public sentiment as have the past two weeks in the primary contest for the Republican nomination as Governor. This statement is based entirely upon all surface indications. What may be working underneath no man can tell, but if the general public sentiment as it has been determined in many years of Massachusetts campaigning can be relied upon at all, the Republicans of Massachusetts are going to put an emphatic seal of approval upon the candidacy of Congressman McCall for this year's nomination for Governor. The time has passed for any criticism of Mr. Cushing; the time has passed for any comment upon the character of his campaign, the issues he has raised, or the right he has through public service to aspire to the high position; the time has now come for Republican voters to place emphasis upon the importance of making this stirring swing toward McCall on the eve of the primary a factor in carrying him to a triumphant election in November.

The primary of next Tuesday gives to every Republican voter another added vote over that which he used to have. It is an added vote because by its casting in a contest, it may place such emphasis upon the man who is endorsed, as to be of tremendous effect in putting a Republican Governor in power in Massachusetts. The Andover vote next Tuesday should be a big one, and it probably will be a big one because of the local contests. Its size, however, should represent not alone a preference between the men in Andover who are running, but should represent a pronounced sentiment on the part of Andover Republicans in favor of the type of public service, the character of statesmanship, the strong, vigorous leadership, the high-minded public service of a man like Mr. McCall, who is willing to serve the Republican party and the Commonwealth. It isn't enough that he earned the right to run by his tremendous effort a year ago, important as that is. It isn't enough that he has the ability to make an excellent Governor in Massachusetts; but more important than these conditions is the putting a man of his kind in control of the State affairs which guarantees a new order of things, bound to be of tremendous benefit to every man, woman and child in the State which is today suffering under the burdens of bad government in a way that many of the citizens know little about, and in a way that can be corrected only by a closer relationship between the Governor and the Legislature, both controlled by the same party.

Mr. McCall is equipped to do the right service at the head of the executive branch. He is probably the only Republican in Massachusetts who can be elected to do this service, and the Republican duty is clear to make the first vote in securing this service by casting it for his nomination next Tuesday.

SCHOOLS AND ACADEMIES OPEN

New Year Started at Local Institutions of Learning. Increased Enrollment at Phillips, Abbot and Punchard High. Public Schools Close on Account of Heat

Abbot Academy opened yesterday with an enrolment of 101 boarding pupils and 40 day scholars. Ten of the younger house girls are at the lately-acquired Shearer house, which is now called Sherman Cottage and is in charge of Miss Sherman, who will live there with her mother.

The news of the resignation of Miss Runner has been received with great regret by all, for it had been hoped that her health would permit her to return this year. She is now living with her father and mother in Austin, Minnesota. We shall also miss Miss Wilkins, who has gone to the Albany Academy for Girls, where she will be at the head of the Mathematics department. Miss Thompson was married in June to Rev. John Frederick Morris of Glen Sutton, in the Province of Quebec. Miss Bixby is to be secretary at the Calhoun Colored School in Calhoun, Alabama, this winter.

The Latin department is to be in charge of Miss Gussanda Countway of Tufts College, 1904, who will be assisted by Miss Bertha Morgan of Cornell, 1912. Miss Elizabeth Stoody of the School of Home Science in Washington, D. C., and of the New York Teachers' College, will teach the courses in Household Science. Miss Margaret Elliott, Wellesley 1914, will be assistant in Mathematics, and the new librarian is Miss Marion Hosmer King, Vassar 1913. The Art department will be under the direction of Miss Marion E. Pooke, a graduate of Smith College, who has been at the Massachusetts Normal Art School and the Boston Art Museum, and has studied in Europe.

One of the pleasantest changes that greeted returning teachers and pupils was the newly-furnished faculty parlor, which has been done over in shades of gray and rambler rose, with English chintz coverings and warm silk curtains. This change was made possible by the gifts of several friends, notably that of the class of 1884 and of Mrs. Draper. Also much appreciated are the new toplights in the dining-room, a gift of the class of 1915. A very attractive lunchroom has been fitted up for the day-scholars in the Infirmary building.

Phillips Academy began its 138th year this week. Entrance examinations were held on Tuesday and Wednesday, the actual class work beginning on Thursday. The school will be full as usual, and from present registration figures it would appear that the number of new bbys will be somewhat in excess of that of last year. The exact figures for the old boys returning cannot be determined before the end of the week. That the enrolment will approximate 575 students seems probable.

The position in the modern language department formerly held by Maurice C. Blake will be taken by Edward L. Baker of Pennsylvania State College. Mr. Baker has done extensive language study in Germany, France and Spain.

Mr. Kern has taken a position with H. H. Rogers of the Standard Oil Company, and his place will be taken by another Rhodes Scholar from Oxford, Hendrick G. Hudson, a graduate of Utah and for the past year an instructor in that institution.

An extra man has been added in the person of Alexander B. Bruce, P. A. 1911, Harvard 1915. Mr. Bruce was a scholar of very high standing both at Andover and Harvard, and will serve as assistant in Chemistry and Physics.

In the department of modern languages V. C. Blanchard has also been added. Mr. Blanchard is a graduate of Bates College and of the Springfield Training School. In addition to his work as instructor in German, Mr. Blanchard will assist Dr. Page in the work of the physical department and will have direct charge of the track team. In this latter work he will be assisted by several other members of the faculty who have contributed their services in the past. Mr. Blanchard will thus combine the work done last year by Mr. Briggs and Mr. Peet, neither of whom is to return to the school this year.

The most conspicuous change on the material side of the school is the addition of the new Phillips Union, a building recently erected on Phillips street close to the Archaeology Building. The Union is intended to be a center for the social life of the student body. The basement will be given up to a restaurant and grill room, the main floor to the school reading-room, and the top floor to various school organizations to be used as a meeting room. The building is of Colonial design, costing about $28,000, and will be formally dedicated in connection with the exercises of Founders' Day on Saturday, October 2.

The public schools opened Monday and the enrollment, especially at the Punchard school, is in advance of last year. The number of pupils at the high school is 224, the highest in the history of Punchard. Conditions do not favor the handling of so many students and a room at the Jackson school has been utilized for recitations. The enrollment is as follows:

Punchard	224
Stowe	231
John Dove and Jackson	310
Indian Ridge	141
Bradlee	137
Richardson	36
West Centre	36
North	36
Bailey	35
Osgood	28
Total	1213
Enrollment in 1914	1183

Rally and Smoker

In spite of the terrific heat Thursday evening nearly 100 voters attended the rally and smoke-talk held in Abbott Village hall by Barnett Rogers, Republican candidate for the representative nomination. The gathering was presided over by Alexander Lamont, and Mr. Rogers in the course of his remarks compared the State tax today with that of several years ago. He said that whereas Andover formerly paid $0.47 per $1000, today it was $2.68. He told of the great extravagance in State affairs and showed the voters present thereby.

He also spoke on the tariff and its benefit to industries, and said he had always urged protection as a sure means for prosperity. A smoke-talk followed and many questions were asked in regard to political matters. Two solos by Henry Fairweather, with Thomas Gorrie as accompanist, were well rendered and greatly enjoyed. The meeting was a profitable one and Mr. Rogers was thanked for his interest.

ANNUAL FLOWER SHOW

Exhibitions up to Standard of Former in Quality. Decrease in Number of Entries. Fruits and Vegetables Show Falling off. The List of Prize-winners

The exhibition of flowers, fruits and vegetables, the sixth annual, under the auspices of the Florists and Gardeners' Club, The A. V. I. S. and the Andover Guild, was held last Friday and Saturday in the town hall. The list of entries was not quite as large as in former years, due in a great measure to the very rainy summer, but the exhibition of flowers was fully up to the standard. Every available inch of space in the hall was occupied. Asters, dahlias, zinnias, snapdragon, cosmos, gladioli, were in profusion, while the fern and wild flower collections made a splendid background at the rear of the hall. The stage was given up to table decorations and several very tasteful designs attracted much favorable criticism.

The fruit and vegetable exhibits were few in comparison to other years, and these showed the biggest falling off. As usual Myron E. Gutterson secured premier honors for vegetables. In the flower show contests, John Nicoll and William A. Trow secured the greatest number of prizes, the latter excelling in the dahlia exhibit, while the former carried off prizes in many classes. Henry Fairweather, M. E. Gutterson and Henry A. Bodwell also won a goodly number of awards.

The Fiske, Fottler and Rawson Co. of Boston had an excellent display of gladioli, dahlias and buddleia near the entrance to the hall.

The attendance was not as satisfactory as the splendid exhibition warranted, the extreme heat being responsible. The committee in charge put forth a great amount of energy and thought and overcame many obstacles in their endeavors to keep the show up to the average of other years.

The judges were Mrs. Edward Berndstrom of Lawrence, George Westland of North Andover and Frank Leith of Haverhill. For table decorations, Mrs. Granville E. Foss, Jr., of North Andover, Mrs. Hugo Beil of Lawrence, and Mrs. Bernard Sheridan of Lawrence made the awards.

Mrs. Carrie S. Buchan Honored

At the annual convention of the Essex County Woman's Relief Corps, held in the First Baptist church, Salem, on Tuesday, Mrs. Carrie S. Buchan of Central street was elected by an overwhelming vote junior vice-president. Two names, Mrs. Crossley of Lawrence and Mrs. Buchan, were placed in nomination but the latter declined the honor. The demand for her services, however, was so insistent that she finally consented to run and she was elected by 101 votes to 9. Mrs. Buchan was escorted to the platform and the president of the county congratulated the corps on the selection they had made. She also spoke in glowing terms of the great work the newly-elected vice-president had done for the Relief Corps in her home town.

Junior Vice-President Buchan has been at the head of the local Relief Corps for the past three years and her energy and enthusiasm have placed the organization in a very efficient state. Mrs. Buchan is Noble Grand of the Indian Ridge Rebekah lodge and also a prominent worker in the Andover Mothers' Club. Her many friends here will be glad to learn of her most recent appointment.

Andover Changes into Merrie England

Tired of the war? Wish politics were where war is what? Got troubles of your own?

Then forget it all. Come to the town hall on October 20, 21, and 22, and jump three centuries into the past.

As you enter, you will find yourself in the year 1615, on a village green in Merrie England. Behind you is the ancient inn (architecture by LeBoutillier) through whose door you have entered the past. Around you throng (in costumes by H. Winthrop Peirce) flower girls and ballad singers, yeomen, goodwives, merry-andrews, puppet-players, minstrels, gallants and ladies from the Court, with here and there a cheerful outlaw with an eye on your purse; all of whom, like yourself, have come to the village fair to shop at the booths, and to make merry on the green.

Opposite the inn door, a travelling montebank has set his stage, on which, as is the custom of the time, are given divers masques and dances, glees and pageantries. A "maister" of the new art of the "poking rapier", lately arrived with his pupils from France, will challenge to combat the "sword and buckler men" of England; a "bear-ward" from Bonnie Scotland will exhibit his "tutored bear"; a bevy of village maids will vie with a group of court dames. There will be morris-dances and mystery plays, songs of ancient time, fragments of old dramas.

Whoso brings a generous thirst will find the nutbrown ale—non-alcoholic—in the tap-room of the inn (decorations by Mrs. Bartlett Hayes after the Renaissance tapestries in the Metropolitan Museum). The hucksters at the booths will fill all other wants.

For the small sum of a silver shilling, time will turn back three hundred years. Come and have the miracle performed!

OBITUARY

JOHN PHELPS TAYLOR

In the death of Professor John Phelps Taylor last Monday, Andover lost a well-beloved citizen. Professor Taylor was born here in 1841, the son of Rev. John Lord Taylor, D.D., at that time minister of the South church and afterward long identified with the Theological Seminary as treasurer and professor. His mother was Caroline Lord Phelps, a descendant of prominent colonial settlers in Connecticut and Massachusetts.

John Phelps Taylor made a brilliant record as a student, graduating from Phillips Academy with highest honors in 1858. One of his schoolmates testifies warmly to his fine influence over his fellows. He completed his course at Yale College in 1862, being the valedictorian of his class. One of his classmates and closest friends both at Andover and Yale was the late Melville C. Day, the benefactor of Phillips Academy. At Yale Mr. Taylor was a member of Psi Upsilon, Skull and Bones, and Phi Beta Kappa, and in later years was one of the first members of the Boston Yale Club. He had a lifelong enthusiasm for Yale and for his college class.

The next two years after college he devoted to teaching and travel and to the study of modern languages at Paris, Bonn, and Venice. In 1865 Mr. Taylor entered Andover Theological Seminary, from which he graduated in 1868. During one year of his Seminary course he taught Latin and Greek in Phillips Academy, and for the larger part of another academic year he was granted leave of absence for travel with his father in Europe and the Holy Land. His marked ability as a student had enabled him in three months to anticipate the class-work of the entire year.

On October 14, 1868, he married Antoinette Hall of a well-known New Haven family, whom he had met in his college days. In that year, too, he was ordained to the Congregational ministry and became pastor of the South church in Middletown, Conn., where he remained till 1874. After two years at the United church, Newport, R. I., and a brief period of study at Andover, he accepted, in 1878, a call to the Second Congregational church of New London, Conn., where he had a happy pastorate of nearly six years. In 1883 he was called to the Taylor Professorship in Andover Seminary, a chair that had been endowed by Frederic H. Taylor of Andover, and Dr. John Lord Taylor. For sixteen years Professor Taylor was a teacher of Biblical History and Literature, and lecturer in Oriental Archaeology in the Seminary. During the early part of this period he carried on special studies with Prof. Lyon of Harvard, Prof. Haupt of Johns Hopkins, and Prof. Gottheil of Columbia. In 1885 he was lecturer on Egyptology at the Peabody Institute of Baltimore; from 1888 to 1892 he was a director of the American Oriental Society; and from 1884 to 1893 he was contributing editor on archaeology to the Andover Review. With the other theological professors he served as preacher at the Seminary Chapel. He received the degree of Doctor of Divinity from Middlebury College, Vermont, in 1897.

Like his father, Professor John Phelps Taylor was deeply interested in local history and town affairs. At the time of the 250th anniversary of Andover he was a member of the General Committee of Fifteen which had charge of the celebration, and he was always a generous contributor to Andover's varied philanthropies.

Since his retirement from active teaching in 1899, he has devoted himself to study and travel and to the interests of Phillips and Abbot Academies. From 1892 till his death he was a devoted and generous trustee of Abbot. He frequently visited the school and enjoyed the friendship both of teachers and pupils. The prosperity of Abbot was one of his deepest joys.

The election of Professor Taylor as president of the Phillips Academy Alumni Association for the year 1912-13 was a fitting recognition of his lifelong loyalty and his invaluable services to Phillips, for it was largely through his intimate friendship with Mr. Melville C. Day that Mr. Day's princely generosity toward Phillips Academy was fostered. The last and most beautiful of the dormitories given by Mr. Day fittingly bears the name of John Phelps Taylor Hall.

Professor Taylor was gifted with a remarkab e memory and he was an accomplished linguist. To the end of his life he kept up his readings in the classics and in the oriental and modern languages. In youth and age, he was an enthusiastic traveller and an ardent student of art, history, and literature. As a preacher he was welcomed from time to time in the local churches and in other cities and towns of New England. As a speaker and as a writer he had unusual gifts of expression. He delighted in literary composition and his style was characterized by a rich vocabulary and by a wealth of allusion and quotation.

Although for several years past he has not been in vigorous health, it was only last week that he was compelled by illness to withdraw from his accustomed activities. He was confined to his bed for four days and passed away quietly at half-past nine Monday morning. A multitude of friends in many places have been thinking during these past few days and have spoken one to another of his refinement and devoutness of nature and his beauty of spirit, of his patience and cheerful unselfishness; and by the people of Andover Professor Taylor will long be affectionately remembered as a gentleman of the old school, a thoughtful neighbor, a good citizen, and as a friend of rare kindliness.

Funeral Services

The funeral service was held Thursday afternoon at his late residence, 22 School street. A double quartet from Abbot and Phillips Academies under the direction of Mr. Pfatteicher, sang "O God, the Rock of Ages," "Jerusalem the Golden," and "Jesus, Lover of My Soul." After scripture reading by Rev. M. W. Stackpole, minister of Phillips Academy, Professor W. H. Ryder, a former colleague, gave a brief address. He was followed by President Albert Parker Fitch of Andover Seminary, who made fitting remarks and offered prayer. The burial takes place this afternoon at Mrs. Taylor's family lot at Evergreen cemetery, New Haven. A memorial service will be held later in the autumn.

Prof. Ryder's remarks were as follows:

"We are met in this place, good neighbors, and friends, this afternoon, with sad but with peaceful and trustful hearts. A good man has lived his life among us here, has borne his daily testimony to the grace and power of the Gospel which he professed, and has entered peacefully into the rest which remains for the people of God. While we grieve at the thought that we shall not see him again in these familiar places, we trust him and ourselves into the care of our Heavenly Father, and our Savior whom he served, and we encourage in our hearts that hope which is to the soul as an anchor, sure and steadfast, entering into that which is within the veil.

Professor Taylor was born in this community and spent the greater part of his more than three score and ten years as a resident here. He inherited a profound and vital interest in the material, the intellectual and social, the moral and religious interests of the community, and from his early manhood he maintained and expressed this interest in all the relations of his life in the town in which he lived.

He was a faithful member of the church of Christ, ministering of his time and labor, and of his material possessions to the church of which his father was the revered and beloved pastor for many a year, and transferring his special interest to the church of which he was a member, and of which for a considerable time he was pastor, doing all that lay within his power to advance the interest of these congregations. At the same time he had a catholic interest in all the religious affairs of the community. There was no pastor here, no teacher in our schools, no man or woman engaged in any good and helpful work, who did not know that they had his sympathy, and could have his aid whenever they needed it.

"I have never known a man who was more willing to take up a task, to aid any one who was at any time in straits through sickness, or through any appointment of Providence. He was always ready to say what was in his heart, and to express it in such a way as to interest and instruct those to whom he ministered.

"In the more material affairs of this village he was always deeply interested. He did not have an aggressive spirit or a disposition to dominate in affairs. He never claimed by even a thought in his own heart any special right because of his long residence here, and the interest which he had inherited and which he maintained in the community, but he was always ready to render any service which his fellow citizens desired him to render.

"Many of us remember, and will always remember, as long as we live, his eloquent and bright address at the 250th anniversary of the incorporation of this town.

"In the more immediately social and personal relations he was always a pleasant man to meet. It did us good to take his hand upon the street, to welcome him to our houses, to see his kindly smile and hear his cheerful and helpful words. He visited the afflicted and suffering in their times of need, and always rejoiced with those who rejoiced. He was particularly careful to inquire about absent members of our families, especially if they were afflicted with sickness or with any misfortune.

"It was, however, especially in the close relations of his home that his gracious and tender Christian life manifested itself supremely. A faithful, kind, considerate husband, cheering and comforting the wife to whom he pledged his youth and with whom he walked in mutual affection through these many years; a genial host, making those who shared in his hospitality the happier and better by his kindly conduct; an employer who had the rare grace of combining the dignity of a courteous gentleman with the grace and kindness of a personal friend.

"We shall miss him sadly in our homes, and in our village, but we shall feel as long as we live the influence of his gracious and uplifting life. He was a good man, full of the Holy Ghost and of faith. He walked with God, and he is not, for God has taken him."

President Fitch spoke as follows:

"Although death is the universal experience of man, yet death in infinitely various. There were the two thieves and the Christ that hung upon their crosses, and all three seemed to die alike, and yet between the death of Jesus and the death of the other two men was an infinite difference—all the difference that lay between the lives that had preceded. And, indeed, the deaths seemed to be even more different than the lives that preceded them, because the extraordinary and appalling thing about death is this,—it focuses a human life, it consumates it, it completes it, it reveals and interprets and finishes it. That is why, I suppose, men's judgment of the dead are so extraordinarily fair, and why men who have been misunderstood in their lives, or misapprehended in their lives, when they come to die are seen just as they are. There is an extraordinary fairness in the universe that at the end makes things right.

"It is with a free and a happy heart, therefore, that I say my word of appreciation of Dr. Taylor out of those few years in which I was privileged to know him. I can see very clearly some of the reasons why I, together with all those who knew him, both loved and trusted his life.

"One reason, it seems to me, is this,—He had such beautiful and such significant manners. We are a hurried and an informal age. We do not pay very much attention to the amenities of life. We have forgotten what the ancient people meant when they said that manners and morals are closely related to each other; we do not remember how manners reflect the character that is behind. But Dr. Taylor was a man of kindly and beautiful manners. One always felt that he was putting himself in the place of those to whom he spoke. There was that unconscious, because habitual, custom of always thinking of the other person rather than himself. With all these boys and girls it was no small service, I think, which Dr. Taylor rendered to this community that he moved among them a gracious, beautiful, thoughtful figure.

"Another reason to my mind why he was both loved and trusted was because of his interest in youth. There are very wide spaces set between the day when he was a lad in this town and this day; it is a new kind of boy and a new kind of girl that are coming into our modern world. And yet this man, far advanced in years, having passed way beyond the life that these girls and boys were leading, liked them, was seriously and profoundly interested in them, believed in them. I cannot believe that Dr. Taylor understood the life of these boys and girls. It was more rare and beautiful than that. Without quite understanding it he accepted it, and had faith in it. There was that splendid moral life in him which gave the capacity for faith in an interpretation of the rising life of this generation, so different from the rising life of that generation to which he was accustomed. And so I recall this kindly, gracious figure, filled with old-world gentleness, and with the quaint and formal and beautiful courtesy of an unhurried and more self-respecting time; and coupled with that the eager interest in the boys and girls growing up about him.

"His whole life, like that which Wordsworth describes in 'Tintern Abbey', was filled with little unremembered acts of kindness and of love that form the best portion of a good man's life.

"Mrs. Taylor has asked me to read the poem by Lord Tennyson which was a favorite with Dr. Taylor:

Sunset and evening star and one clear call for me,
And may there be no moaning of the bar when I put out to sea;
But such a tide as rising seems asleep, too full for sound and foam,
When that which drew from out the boundless deep turns again home.

Twilight and evening bell, and after that the dark,
And may there be no sadness of farewell when I embark.
For though from out our borne of time and place the flood may bear me far,
I hope to see my pilot face to face when I have crossed the bar.

In Memoriam

In sad and loving memory of my dear husband and loving father, David Long, who parted from this life, September 5, 1911.

On this earth no more we'll see him,
God has called him up above;
He is singing with the angels
In the land of peace and love.

Fond thoughts may linger round our hearts
And tears often flow,
But to that sad and lonely grave
Our thoughts will often go.

May the heavenly winds blow softly
O'er that sweet and hallowed spot.
'Mid the changing scenes of life, dear,
You will never be forgot.

By your loving wife and family,

MRS. IDA M. RYLEY

Obituary

MRS. HANNAH GRAY

Last week Thursday morning the death of Mrs. Hannah M. Gray, widow of the late Benjamin Osgood Gray of North Andover, occurred at the home of her eldest son, Ira O. Gray, on Washington avenue. The end came peacefully after a short illness and marked the passing of one of the most respected souls in the community in which she lived.

Mrs. Gray was born in the North Parish of Andover eighty-three years ago, and her long and useful life has been spent in this town and in North Andover. For the last six years she has been in failing health, but her good words and kindly deeds never failed and she will be missed by her family and many neighbors and friends.

To mourn her loss she leaves two sons, Ira O. of this town, and Willie H. of Cambridge, and one daughter, Mrs. Joseph Smith of North Andover; and six grandchildren; one sister, Mrs. Clarissa A. Dane; and two brothers, Lorenzo Woodbridge and Albert Woodbridge of Beachmont.

The funeral was held last Sunday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock, services being conducted by Rev. E. Victor Bigelow of the South church. Several vocal selections, hymns beloved by the deceased, were sung by a quartet consisting of Mrs. Frederick G. Moore, Miss Anna Holt, Everett Collins and Mr. Barnes. The flowers surrounding the bier were very beautiful and testified to the love and esteem of those who knew Mrs. Gray. The bearers were Joseph W. Smith of North Andover, and Arthur, Claremont and Harold Gray of this town. Burial took place in the family lot in the Spring Grove cemetery.

Card of Thanks

For the good will of neighbors and friends during Mrs. Gray's life, and for the sympathy expressed by the beautiful flowers at the time of her funeral, we wish to express our thanks at this time.

Ambition

Two quotations too long to handle remind me of the man who said the earth was divided between those who had got it and those who wanted to get it. Nations and individuals alike are today proving the truth of this saying.

One bit was from Jerome K. Jerome who said contented, unambitious people were very well in their way and were a good background for the greater portraits, or an audience before which the more active spirits could play. He calls this class dead heads, drones, street crowds gaping and lounging. They never know the excitement of expectation, the delight of accomplished effort, that stirs the pulse of the man with objects, hopes and plans. Life is a brilliant game that calls forth energy and nerve to be won by the quick eye and steady hand, with chance to give a glorious zest of uncertainty. He has, if defeated, the grim joy of the figth. The run, if the race be lost.

Then telephone magnet, Vail, holds forth as to the "efficiency" required in the business field. One must make good. Results alone count. A youth who starts without a serious intention to win and does not work hard, finds himself a loser. What is called hard luck is mostly aimless and spineless drifting and so on. I am one of the gaping crowd myself and have full sympathy with my brother loungers.

Why not accept the station in which we are called, 'therein' to be content not 'therewith' said Rev. George Mooar at one time in the only sermon of his that I recall. Recall the the efficient work of the thirty years of the divine Carpenter of Nazareth and the power gathered for the last three years of ministry to his country, and the ages. There is something wrong about these new standards. Common honesty, common good service, in home and state, must come from the great body of what Jerome calls contented people.

Who would change a good head of hair for Rockfeller's bald pate? or a digestion of fair calibre with gumption to supply the failing wants of old brains and muscles with his dyspepsia? Who would give a quiet life here in a home guarded by the kindly care of the community, with his barbed wire defences and paid guardians?

Of course his is an extreme case of achievement. With him there was no joy in helping along the other fellow to a good place in the sun, to a competency if nothing providential, sets Who does not want to make life a game, but a simple paradize of one's own tastes, not a German or any other autocratic system for raising the standard of living. Self-seeking against "lending a hand." Which shall it be; which will be the best training for the unseen world we live in, that a cold breath from the poles or a passing auto truck or an unworthy picnic boat or a neighbor's gutter, may introduce us into and out of this world of efficiency and push. Where are this world's profits of acsh or culture placed in the assets of a broader life?

Sweep under the door mats, do the daily round of duty, ready for a call to higher tasks, remembering that life is not a game for prizes but a training for better work later on, and take the job you are fitted for.

Persons who are in the habit of using the down town streets quite frequently cannot help noticing the large number of panhandlers who are plying their trade and are annoying pedestrians. Some of these men are becoming so bold as to assault those who refuse to give them the price of a drink.

With Alderman Cadogan, director of public safety, recording the only vote in opposition, an amendment to the traffic laws was accepted by the city council at Monday's meeting. The amendment provides that all vehicles shall stop when approaching an electric car that is stopped to take on or discharge passengers.

Owing to the diversity of opinion known to exist amongst residents of South Lawrence regarding the proposed establishment of a baseball field in the South Union Street park, which has been persistently advocated before the municipal council, it was decided by the city government members Monday to give a public hearing upon the matter in the John Breen School hall in South Lawrence next Monday night at 7.30 o'clock.

The Essex County grand jury convened at the local court house Monday morning to consider cases which will be tried at the fall term of superior criminal court which comes in next Monday in this city. A party of fifty will leave today for New York where they will take passage on an Italian liner, and on September 27 another party of fifty will go by the same way. Mrs. Kelley spoke interestingly on her subject and despite the oppressive heat, held the complete attention of her large audience during the entire course of her address. At the close of the talk she opened a short question-box period and answered a number of questions propounded by citizens interested in the movement.

A corn supper was held in the Oakland M. E. church Wednesday evening by the Dorcas society. The ladies arranged an excellent menu and a large gathering was present. Mr. Russell kindly donated 400 ears of corn and a "husking bee" was held at the home of Mrs. Dronsfield, Oak street, Tuesday evening, to which all friends were invited.

At the Baptist church in the middle of October the 100th anniversary of the church will be observed. The century fund acquired as a result of numerous lawn parties and social gatherings has been used to defray expenses incurred in making improvements in the church, which now presents a splendid appearance. Rev. John Ward Moore, the pastor, has been working zealously to further all movements in the church and today it is in a splendid condition. Attendance at services is satisfactory and the activity of church organizations most encouraging.

The annual exhibition of the Methuen Home and School Garden Association held Saturday in the Methuen town hall, proved a gratifying success to those who had the matter in charge. Over 800 individuals exhibited specimens of their flowers or vegetables grown from the seeds furnished through the home and school garden association, and seven schools had exhibits. Those in charge consider that the exhibit this year was superior to those held in the past, this being especially true of the flowers. The seeds this year were secured through Thornton Bros.

The annual district convention of Pythian Sisters was held with Friendship temple of this town on Monday. The temples of Lowell, Lawrence, Ayer, Andover and Methuen were represented, about 100 delegates being present. White of Lawrence, candidate for Republican nomination for high sheriff of Essex County, addressed a large body of citizens. He discussed his imprisonment and assailed those in charge at the time for not doing their duty as they should.

A rare treat was afforded scores of people last Sunday who responded to a public invitation extended through the newspapers by Miss Ruth Ely of Providence, R. I., a summer resident of this place, to visit the gardens on her estate, "Green Gate", on Salem street, between the hours of 3 and 6 o'clock. The display was magnificent. Flowers in wide variety and of exceeding beauty were shown to an advantage and the opportunity of visiting the gardens was keenly enjoyed not only by many townspeople but by many from outside. "Green Gate" was formerly owned by the Misses Ward, when the estate was known as "Clovercroft."

Bay State Street Railway far from Bankruptcy

In spite of its plans for a six-cent car-fare, the public records on file with the Public Service commission show that the Bay State Street Railway Company was not, prior to December, 1914, at any rate, in immediate danger of being forced to sell its property to feed its starving stockholders and directors.

For five years prior to December, 1914, the Bay State earned a dividend of at least five per cent, the records show, and the company was placed on the list of savings bank investments by the Public Service commission. The certificate of its earnings for this year is not due until December, but it is evident that for six or seven years past the Bay State has been earning a very good dividend.

Chapter 590 of the Acts of 1908 require the Public Service commission to submit, after investigation into the assets and conditions of every street railway company over which it has jurisdiction, a list of those companies which have for the past five years earned a dividend of five per cent or over. The companies so listed are placed on the list of savings bank investments. At the conclusion of the year ending December, 1914, ten street railway companies in this state were found to be in the savings bank investment class and among the ten, strange to say, was the Bay State Street Railway Company.

The Bay State Street Railway Company was not chartered until 1911 by the Legislature. It is the result of the merger of the former Boston & Northern and Old Colony Street Railway companies. The report of the Public Service commission, therefore, is the result of an investigation of the two companies which formed the Bay State.

In 1912 there was no certificate that the Bay State Street Railway Company should be a savings bank investment, probably because of the extreme youth of the Bay State Company at that time. In 1913 and 1914, however, the Public Service board did certify to the fact that this street railway company had earned the right to be placed on the list of savings bank investments.

This country has been feeding seven million Belgians for the past year, but it is to be hoped that it won't be called on to support a like number of Poles. It would be quite an expense, judging by the following articles that a Portland Pole ate at one meal the other evening: eight pounds canned tomatoes; a loaf of bread; six eggs; six cookies; one quart ice cream soda. The United States has enormous resources but they are not illimitable.

To Violin Students

The beauty of the violin in the hands of an artist need not be treated of at any length here. No other instrument can express so truly, so deeply and richly the great musical thoughts and dreams of the composer. The secret of good violin playing is intelligent instruction at the beginning of one's musical education—not only in all that relates to technique, but also in true interpretation of the ideas which the changing tones and chords are intended to convey, and to attain this end, the services of a competent, conscientious and painstaking teacher are absolutely necessary. If the pupils are young children, the instruction must be imparted to them in a pleasing manner, otherwise little progress is to be expected, and in fact, through the whole musical course, the teacher should be like a guide in some mountainous country, ever presenting new delights to his followers. A rare opportunity is offered to those who desire high-class violin instruction. Mr. Joseph Emile Daudelin of the Boston Institute of Music follows the system in use at the famous Paris Conservatoire where he was a student. He can be consulted Saturdays at the Briggs-Allen school, Arco Building, Andover, Mass., or write to Joseph Emile Daudelin, Steinert Hall, Boston, Mass.

The Native Festivals of Java

Among Oriental monarchs none maintain such gorgeous courts as those little-known sovereigns the Susushan of Solo and the Sultan of Djokja, Java's two remaining native rulers. Surrounded by hordes of strangely-uniformed retainers, consisting of soldiers, musicians, singers, dancers, and bearers of fan and umbrella, pipe and betel-box, the courts of these rulers present an extraordinary spectacle that recalls a comic opera on a colossal scale.

The monarchs referred to oniy rule in name, for the whole of the island of Java is in possession of the Dutch and is entirely governed by them. Indeed, these native kings are virtually political prisoners in their own extensive palace grounds, for they are not even allowed to receive visitors or to undertake a journey without the consent of the Dutch Resident. Nevertheless, they wield considerable influence and maintain their courts with all the barbaric splendor of mediaeval days, jealously observing customs that date back five hundred years and more.

Surakarta and Dokjakarta, more commonly called Solo and Djokja, where these courts are situated' are the capitals of the two Middle States of Java. The rulers of these provinces were the last to yield to the oversea usurpers, and, as tributary princes enjoying a "protected and controlled independence", accept an "advisory elder brother", in the person of a Dutch Resident, who sits at their sovereign elbows and by "suggestions" rules their territories for the greater good of the natives and the Dutch exchequer. All the region around Djokja and Solo is classic ground, and the oldest Javanese myths and legends, the earliest traditions of native life, have their "locale" hereabouts. As a result, Djokja and Solo have been the least affected by contact with Western methods, and here Javanese life has remained virtually unchanged.

It is said of the Sultan of Djokja that he has nine hundred and ninety-nine wives, one hundred and fifty state carriages, a stud of huge Burmese elephants, and a hundred fighting cocks. This, of course, is an exaggeration, though it is true that he has many wives, a host of carriages, some elephants, and a number of fighting cocks. By ancient Javanese law, which the Sultan rigorously follows, he has one chief lady consort, known as the Ratu, or Sultana, and eight legal wives of the first rank. In addition to these there are twenty-four wives of the second rank, and another twenty young girls who may be described as aspiring wives. The total number of his female servants is one hundred and twenty-five. When they are on duty, as on all festive occasions, they wear the "knife of service"—the kris, or native dagger—in the side of their belts. Their dress on such occasions, too, is indicative of their position, the wives of the first rank being gowned in the most gorgeous of silks and satins and covered in jewels and diamonds.—The Wide World Magazine.

The Wind and the Gypsy Moth

That the wind is chiefly responsible for the general spread of the gypsy moth in New England is the conclusion reached as the result of an investigation carried on by the Department of Agriculture at Washington in 1913 and 1914, the report of which has just been published as Bulletin No. 273. It has been found that in the last forty years the pest has gained an average of five miles a year toward the Northeast in consequence of the southwest winds which prevail in New England during the season most favorable for the dissemination of the moth larvae. To the northward the gain has been at the rate of two and one-half miles per year, while in other directions the spread has been slower.

To prevent this spread continuing, the badly infested areas near the border, says the report, must be brought under control. This can be accomplished either by natural enemies or by hand methods, or by both. In the infested territory, its natural enemies are now performing important services. The quarantine on lumber products, Christmas trees, nursery stock, and stone from the infested territory is also, it is believed, an efficient precaution against the spread of the pest into other sections of the United States. The necessity for hand work on the borders of the infested areas is, however, emphasized by the evidence of the great part that the wind plays in disseminating the larvae. The maximum distance that it is known larvae have been carried by the wind is thirteen and one-half miles. It is probable, however, that there are unrecorded instances in which this record has been exceeded.

"How I Broke into Print"

Richard Harding Davis, whose descriptive work in connection with the European War is considered equal to anything that has been written since hostilities commenced, is one of those fortunate men whose short stories can always command a thousand dollars and over. How he "broke into print" is an interesting little history. "It was while at Lehigh University," he says, "that I earned my first sum for writing. It was a description of a 'cane rush' at the university, and I sent it to a local paper. It was published and a few days later I received a check for the large sum of one dollar and fifteen cents. I have received larger checks since then, but the biggest of them never gave me the thrill that that one did. Just as soon as I cashed that check I sallied out to buy 'something' with it—I had no idea what—and in my search I found two very nice-looking candle-sticks which, I think, were about the price of the story I had sold. I bought them. They were made of brass, and seemed very solid and handsome. One I sent to my mother and the other I kept for myself. They are still in existence, I believe, a shining witness to the first fracture I made in my youthful endeavor to 'break into print'."—Strand Magazine.

"Why, look here," said the merchant who was in need of a boy, "aren't you the same boy who was here a week ago?"

"Yes, sir," said the applicant.

"I thought so. And didn't I tell you that I wanted an older boy?"

"Yes, sir. That's why I'm back now."—Ladies' Home Journal.
